So here's the real issue.

Not always was the kangaroo as now we do behold him, but a very different animal with four short legs.

Now you might think it was a different way. You might think, He was grey and he was woolly, and his pride was inordinate; he danced on an outcrop in the middle of Australia; and he went to the little god Nquing.

But in fact the real story is simply this and nothing more: Not always was the kangaroo as now we do behold him, but a very different animal with four short legs.

So this seems to work. Having it work in a transparallel fashion is something else entirely.
